

- There is no hard evidence that cell phone use doesn't interfere with navigational instruments.
- Cell phone use would enable terrorists to coordinate a plan of action more effectively.
- The NPRM would leave it up to flight attendants to police the use of cell phones onboard the aircraft compromising our ability to maintain a safe, secure cabin environment and to conduct emergency evacuations.
- It would make an already tense cabin environment even more stressful.

Already just letting passenger use them until the aircraft door is closed can be trying at times when we try to make our exit seat carry on announcements because they talk so loud sometimes their conversations go out over our PA...we should never have to compete for passengers attention when we are there trying to keep them safe. Some people talk so loud on them that everyone in the airplane can listen to their conversations even if they'd prefer not to...what about people who want to come on the airplane and sleep and someone is yelling into their phone...it's like smoking some times it's just not the right time or place...please help all flight attendants working in the USA by not allowing this to become the norm. Much Appreciation for you time....Sincerely Reda Sabo
